Read the following excerpt from a memoir.

I completed a week in my current job on Friday. Everybody in the office was courteous and helpful, and I loved being a part of the team. I woke up with a feeling that nothing was going to turn out right that day. For starters, I realised that I had woken up late and barely had time to shower and rush out. There was no time to even have breakfast. I got ready, locked the door and was about to leave when I quickly ran a mental check of everything being in order. Had I switched off all the lights and fans, the geyser? Had I put the milk into the fridge? I was in no mood to listen to Mr Sharma, my landlord, give me a long lecture on how high the electricity bill was.

I unlocked the door and checked that everything was in order. Satisfied, I closed the door again only to realise that I had left my car keys on the dining table. I went back in to pick them up and ran down the stairs as I had no patience to wait for the lift. I reached to my car, unlocked it and sat

Answer the following question.

Why didn't the narrator have the patience to wait for the lift?

- ☐ Because the serviceman was repairing the lift
- ☒ Because the narrator was getting late for work
- ☐ Because the narrator's friend was waiting for him
- ☐ Because the lift was not working
